Acceptable Use Policy

A useful feature for FrogLearn schools is the Acceptable Use Policy in System Preferences.

We've provided a rich-text input box so you can add a detailed, highlighted, bulleted policy for your users to agree to. Once filled in, you can activate it per profile and force users to re-accept.

When a user logs in, they will be presented with the policy and a checkbox. If the user does not check the box or clicks the Cancel button they are returned to the login screen.

Checking the box, makes the Accept button available and clicking that allows the user to access Frog as usual. It will not appear again until you force users to re-accept using the option in System Preferences.

You cannot export a list of users who have signed up, but it is a way of re-enforcing key points and initiatives. For instance, just because the policy is set for IT Acceptable use, does not mean you could not alter to text for Anti-bullying week and force students to re-accept.
